Top Blog Content Writers:

Darren Rowse (ProBlogger)

For plenty of people, earning a living as a blogger is the dream. Darren Rowse, the blogger behind ProBlogger, is one of the top blog content writers living that dream for more than 15 years. Today, he regularly writes about how to create and manage a blog successfully. ProBlogger also features the work of other writers, has a podcast, a series of e-books and a job board with postings for aspiring and current freelance blog writers.

Carol Tice (Make a Living Writing)

Like Darren Rowse, Carol Tice operates a blog that's full of tips to help freelancers "make a living writing." A top blog content writer and freelancer for more than a decade, Tice has built up a reputation for encouraging writers to get paid what they are worth. She also runs something called "Freelance Writer's Den," a paid, members-only forum where experienced writers dish out information and advice to newbies.

How do I download and install 32-bit Java for Linux?

Java and the JVM (Java's virtual machine) are required for many kinds of software, including Tomcat, Jetty, Glassfish, Cassandra and Jenkins.

In this guide, you will install various versions of the Java Runtime Environment (JRE) and the Java Developer Kit (JDK) using apt. You'll install OpenJDK as well as the official JDK from Oracle. You'll then select the version you wish to use for your projects. When you're finished, you'll be able to use the JDK to develop software or use the Java Runtime to run software.
